

Christopher C. Tillery

Shareholder

Chris Tillery is a trial lawyer and business litigator. He represents business and commercial clients in jury trials, bench trials, class actions, arbitrations, administrative hearings, and mediations, primarily in the areas of business and commercial litigation, employment litigation, construction litigation, products' liability, and premises liability.

An experienced and effective litigator who strives for exceptional results. For over a decade, Chris has successfully tried or arbitrated cases throughout Kansas, Missouri and the United States for a wide-array of clients, including small, mid-size and large businesses, publicly-traded companies, and private and public organizations and individuals. His broad and extensive litigation background encompasses a wide-range of both simple and complex cases, including commercial contract disputes, construction defect and design errors, discrimination and retaliation claims, fraud, tortious interference and other business tort actions, personal injury defense, wrongful death, medical malpractice, mechanics liens, commercial property disputes, landlord-tenant disputes, landowner liability claims, commercial lending disputes, regulatory and administrative actions and investigations, intellectual property disputes, tax disputes, and actions between public officials. Chris fully understands and appreciates the challenges, risks, and expense litigation poses for his clients. He prioritizes being attentive, responsive, and thorough in his communications with clients while his skill, preparation, and dedication allow them to focus on their business and family, knowing that their case is well in hand. Above all, he is a problem solver who prides himself on finding innovative legal solutions that yield effective results and limit his client's costs and exposure as much as possible.

Representative Litigation
