

Greg Whiston

Shareholder

Primarily a litigator, Greg's practice focuses on the areas of sports and entertainment, construction and business litigation. Greg has extensive experience defending professional and amateur sports organizations in player and fan injury claims. Greg currently serves as lead trial counsel for the Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association (MIAA), and four other Division II athletic conferences in connection with nationwide class action litigation, involving head trauma in college football. Through his experience, Greg has developed expertise in the unique challenges facing professional and amateur sports organizations in such lawsuits. In addition to representing clients in the defense of injury claims, as the legal need for this industry rapidly develops, Greg has also worked closely with a number of sports clients in the areas of insurance and risk management. He also leads the firm's "Empower U" for NCAA conferences and institutions to provide educational resources and navigation through the new laws and rules regulating Name, Image, and Likeness compensation for student-athletes.

A well-rounded lawyer to meet your needs. Greg focuses other aspects of his practice on representing clients in all types of business disputes, with particular emphasis in construction disputes. Greg's background in construction, including over 6 years of working in the industry, provides Greg a unique outlook and understanding of the challenges in navigating and managing a construction project, making him the ideal attorney for property owners, suppliers, and contractors who need a wide range of legal services. Greg's construction related services include drafting and negotiating contracts, as well as litigation. Greg also has extensive experience in real estate litigation, having represented a number of clients in real estate related matters, including landlord/tenant disputes, boundary disputes, water rights, quiet title actions and real estate foreclosures. In addition, Greg routinely represents equipment dealers in disputes with manufacturers, as well as real estate professionals, financial institutions, manufacturers, and trucking companies in a variety of legal matters.
