Shareholder

John is a corporate attorney with the ability and expertise to handle a wide range of issues and a reputation for getting things done and successfully achieving his clients' objectives. His experience makes him the ideal attorney for both small and large businesses in a wide variety of industries, including hospitals, federally qualified health centers, equipment dealers, restaurants, and trucking companies.

Outside general counsel. John serves as outside general counsel for hospitals, federally qualified health centers (FQHCs), trucking companies, restaurants, trade associations, and a variety of other businesses. He can help your business with a range of services including employment law compliance, general business and corporate transactions, health care law compliance, governmental investigations, and dispute resolution.

Among the remarks his clients make about John are that they appreciate his high-quality work, his responsiveness, and his ability to get results and protect their interests.

High-quality counsel on employment matters with a focus on avoiding litigation. John has a lot of experience handling employment law matters and is known for helping businesses with employment issues avoid litigation and liability.

In this area, he can help your business with compliance issues and employment-related matters, including best practices for hiring and firing, employment agreements, training of management and human resource departments, wage and hour law compliance and audits, employee handbooks and other personnel policies, handling medical leave situations, governmental investigations, discrimination charges, dispute resolution, and more.

Among John's favorite aspects of serving as a business lawyer is helping his clients avoid litigation, which can be expensive and time-consuming. His goal is to help you keep your money and protect the future of your business.

When he's not practicing law, John serves on the Board of Directors of the Don Bosco Centers. He is an avid sports fan and also enjoys sailing.
