

Mark H. Gilgus

Senior Counsel

Mark joined Seigfreid Bingham in 1990 and has over 40 years of experience serving closely held and family-owned businesses, helping them with business and general corporate matters, as well as business succession and estate planning. His ability to listen to your concerns and pay attention to both the legal and business issues while being prompt in his responses can make him a valuable asset for you and your business.

A background in accounting and business.

Mark has a degree in accounting and worked as a tax accountant for Arthur Andersen after law school. He also spent five years working in the income tax department at the Kansas City law firm of Stinson, Mag & Fizzell, which gives him a unique background in taxation and tax planning. Today, his practice spans business and general corporate matters, including business formations, operations, income and estate tax planning, succession planning, buy-sell agreements, mergers and acquisitions, divestitures, and contractual matters. His clients include individuals, estates, partnerships, trusts, limited liability companies, tax-exempt organizations, C corporations, and S corporations. Mark also works with restaurants and handles a variety of other business matters.

Beyond business: business succession planning and estate planning.

Mark can assist you with basic and sophisticated estate planning strategies to help you meet your personal goals and objectives. As part of that, Mark can develop a business succession plan for your family, while taking into consideration that certain family members may be interested in the business and others may not. As a result, Mark has the experience to transition the wealth of the business to the owner's children, regardless of whether they want to be involved in the business or not.

Building a legacy of giving back.

As a third generation Kansas Citian, Mark cares about giving back to his community. He is a past chair and an emeritus board member of the Kansas City Estate Planning Symposium and past chair of the Heart of America Tax Institute. He presents seminars on estate and business succession planning and has taught accounting and business at UMKC. He is the former chair of the Lee's Summit Arts Council and founding board member of Summit Theatre Group. He
