Colby Stone Appointed to the Board of Directors at the Center for Practical Bioethics

Seigfreid Bingham attorney Colby Stone has been appointed to the Board of Directors of the Center for Practical Bioethics, a nationally recognized organization dedicated to advancing ethical guidance and policy in the health care field.

This appointment reflects Colby’s commitment to thoughtful, community?focused leadership and his deep engagement with the complex ethical issues shaping the rapidly evolving landscape of health care.

The Center for Practical Bioethics’ work entails clinical ethics, end-of-life care, health equity, and emerging biomedical challenges. The organization greatly benefits from board members who bring both legal insight and a strong sense of public service. In this role, Colby will contribute to the strategic direction, governance, and advancement of initiatives that help clinicians, patients, and policymakers navigate health care matters.

To learn more, please click here.