Seigfreid Bingham Attorneys Take Active Role at Heart of America Tax Institute

Seigfreid Bingham, a sponsor of the 63rd Annual Heart of America Tax Institute, was well represented at this year's conference, held November 5–6, 2026, at the University of Missouri-Kansas City. Attorneys Mirjana Gacanich, Mark Gilgus, Colby Stone, and Ryan White attended the two-day event, and John Fuchs presented as a panelist.

The conference featured programming on current developments and emerging issues in tax law, including corporate, state and local, individual and estate planning tax matters, ethics, and other topics affecting tax practitioners and their clients.

John Fuchs served as a panelist for "Practical Tips for Using Generative AI for Tax Practitioners," which explored practical applications of generative AI in legal research, drafting, analysis, and client service, along with considerations involving accuracy, confidentiality, professional responsibility, and the responsible use of AI in practice.

The firm's involvement with the Institute's Planning Committee dates back to the 1980s, when Mark Gilgus joined its board, and continues today. Mirjana Gacanich has served on the committee for five years and currently serves as its Speakers Co-Chair.

The firm's sponsorship and the attorneys' participation reflect Seigfreid Bingham's long-standing support of the Institute and its continued focus on staying informed about developments that affect the firm's clients and their businesses.
